In the suit brought by the Society of St. Gobair against the Transatlantic Steamship Company for damages to plate glass in transit from Havre to New Yerk, Judge Bene-dict yesterlay decided in favor of the defendants, on the ground that the breakage was not caused by their negligence. There were four small boys who at different times resterday told Chief Campbell that they saw the missing

Tweed on Satarday night. But the localities named were so wide apart, and the times so conflicting, that the fugitive must have been ubiquitous. The Superintendent does not believe that Tweed was in Brooklyn on that day. Charles Friedlander and Charles Nostrand have een engaged in a swindling operation which yesterday re-ulted in their arrest. Their plan has been to purchase a few pennies' worth of material at stores, for which they would ten-der a $1 bill. Slyly slipping 25 or 50 cents of the change from the counter, they would claim they were underpaid that sum. Their carnesiness and assumed innocence generally convinced storekeepers, much against their will, that a mis-take had occurred.

There was a report yesterday that the notifications of trial and other legal papers incident to the beginning of saits would be served by Mr. Parsons yesterday or to-day William C. Charles Myers, whom the Temperance Crusaders induced to leave the fiquor business by buying out his place, afterward sold in it. He has abandoned that business 10 s. and says that his temperance friends have ill-used him. They said, declares Mr. Myers, that to be honest would pay, but he has found it otherwise. He cannot compete with those who adulterate their milk, and he has found no hing so profitable as ligor-selling. He intimates that he will be obliged to resume his former eccupation. The temperance people question the sincerity of a conversion which they declare was induced

A man with an iron bar over his shoulder stood A man with an iron bar over his shoulder stood among a crowd of people on the ferry-boat Hamilton wating for it to reach the bridge. It struck with force against the side of the stip, turning the man half around. The bar hit a man full in the face, who fell back instantly with such force upon the crowd that it went over like so many tenjuis against the starboard rail. The offender looked around to learn the cause of the tunnult, when his weapon struck another person who dashed toward the crowd on the other side, which surged over against the port rail. Then the man with the bar strode upon the process of the port and the process of people and marched up the bridge.
